JAN KENNEDY, PH.D.

Associate Professor, Program Head of Art History and Asian Studies

Jan Kennedy joined the faculty at KCAI in 2006, previously working as a lecturer at KCAI and adjunct assistant professor at Washburn University in Topeka, Kan. She received a B.A. in the history of art and English literature, an M.A. in the history of art, and a Ph.D., all from the University of Kansas. Her major area for her Ph.D. was 17th Century Dutch and Flemish paintings and prints, and her minor areas were Venetian Cinquecento painting and Japanese painting of the Edo period. More recently, she was a keynote speaker presenting her current area of research on the Christian art of Japan. Kennedy is a member of the College Art Association, the Historians of Netherlandish Art and the Association for Asian Studies.

REBECCA DUBAY, PH.D.

Associate Professor and Ray Beagle Chair of Art History

Rebecca Dubay, associate professor and Ray Beagle Chair of art history, specializes in art from 1945 to the present. Her research interests include art of the 1960s, the politics of abstraction, gender studies, and migration. Dubay has presented her research at conferences in London, Frankfurt am Main, Nijmegen, and Washington DC, among other cities. In 2018, she was honored with KCAI's Excellence in Teaching Award. Before joining KCAI, Dubay taught in the M.F.A. in studio art program at Moore College of Art and Design. She earned a B.A. degree in art history and business management from the University of South Florida, an M.A. degree in art history from Tufts University, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in the history of art from Bryn Mawr College.
