Illustration: The Six-Word Memoir

INSTRUCTOR: John Ferry

Illustration plays a vital role in narrating the editorial of newspapers and magazines, book covers, graphic novels, advertising, and other forms of media or written communication. Illustrators create imagery that provides a visual indicator of what is being communicated from the written word. In this course, we will use a variety of conventional materials to execute thumb-nail ideas, final sketches and a final execution of an illustration that solves the assignment prompt, a six-word memoir. Each student will explore the aspects of illustrating their ideas for a client, to material and conceptual feedback from the instructor who will act as an Art Director.
